

LEGEND OF THE SEA.

Cheerily Tell That Warm Seamen of Immortal Danger.

There is a delightful legend among the people of Point Prim to the effect that when the English attacked the French fort at that place, a chain-belt from one of the attacking vessels cut the steeple from the old church, and landed on the very point. In falling, it caught over the steeple, and carried the bell which it contained into the sea. Dwellers along the point affirm that from time to time, the sound of that bell comes over the waters of the ocean; and that its plaintive tone is ever a warning of a fierce storm or some imminent danger to those who make their living by the spoils of the ocean.—Donelson.

Many women are denied the happiness of children through derangement of the generative organs. Mrs. Beyer advises women to use Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

"DEAR Mrs. PINKHAM:—I suffered with stomach complaint for years. I got so bad that I could not carry my children but five months, then would have a miscarriage. The last time I miscarried my husband and me to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. After taking the first bottle I was relieved of the sickness of stomach, and began to feel better in every way. I continued its use and was enabled to carry my baby to maturity. I now have a nice baby girl, and can work better than I ever could before. I am like a new woman."

MAINER'S MARVELOUS FISH.

No wonder the fish supply is limited, when they catch anything to eat but lobster trap bait. This is the case of the fish at Mainers. Two men went out one night recently to tend their traps. As they were pulling one they noticed it went sailing round the bay at a lively rate, and they began to get scared. Taking the line in a little more, they saw a fish about three feet long sailing up toward the surface as though he were in distress.

Nothing in the fish line scared these two men, so they pulled the fish aboard and proceeded to investigate. From the fish they pulled eight or ten fat lobsters of good size (meats or less) and a lobster trap. The body was a block of wood, about a foot long and five inches thick. It must have been difficult for the fish to stay under water with such a piece of wood in its stomach.

LANGUAGES OF THE WORLD.

It is estimated that over 5,000 distinct languages are spoken among men. A calculating prodigy would be wanted to compute with exactness how many separate dialects are in use. Sixty years ago it was estimated that six distinct dialects were to be found in Brazil, but the actual number must be far greater, for in such smaller Mexico the dialects have broken up into two dialects. There are hundreds in Europe. In Australia there is no classifying the dialects. And generally the number of dialects is in inverse proportion to the intellectual culture of the population. Assume that only fifty dialects on the average belong to every language and one has the colossal total of a quarter of a million linguistic varieties.

TRAVELER'S ETIQUETTE IN EUROPE.

In a European railway car the person who sits next the window facing the engine has the right to decide whether it shall be up or down. But it would be very bad manners to insist on having the window up, unless there was some special reason for doing so, or if asked to lower it by another passenger, or vice versa.

If you are making a stay you keep the same table or the same place at a table for meals during the whole of the stay.

WAS GIFT FROM WASHINGTON.

Richard, Maine, Man Owns Batch of Musk Interest.

John L. Donahue, an antiquarian of Portland, Maine, is spending to his friends a historical object of much interest in the form of the portrait of George Washington, whose portrait of war he was. It is a common-places hand-drawn leather sketch, about sixteen inches high, twelve inches wide, and six inches deep, with lining of blue, and lined internally with a double cover, which is fastened by a leather strap running through six large staples, the staples covering the whole with straps through staples. In July, 1783, it was sent to carry part of the pay of the Continental army on its march to headquarters. It was made in 1773 and was one of the most valuable pieces of property of Gen. Knox and many associations connected with the gift and the story. The portrait was, after the death of Gen. Knox, in the possession of the family of Gen. Knox, a close friend of Gen. Knox, who also lived in Washington, and who purchased the Knox mansion at Montpelier.

POCKET PIERCE SAVES MAN.

A raven, owner of 100,000, stamped on a small disc of aluminum saved the life of Clerk William J. Weber of the Chicago Avenue police station.

A bullet from a revolver which he held in his hand was stopped in its passage by the bit of aluminum in his watch pocket. The head of the bullet was not from the pocket piece, but the bullet passed the time with lead and made the piece all the more valuable to its owner. "I was cleaning my revolver at my house," said Weber. "It was pointed toward me when discharged."—Chicago After Ocean.

IRISH HARVEST LABORERS.

Some interesting returns have been published by the department of agriculture for Ireland on the subject of the annual migration of the Irish harvest laborers. The yearly influx into England and Scotland, which has been going on in much the same way at least a couple of centuries, is not nearly so great as it was in the days of the potato famine. In 1846 there were still nearly 15,000 Irishmen who sought the old means of finding their pockets against the winter. More than three-quarters of them were from the province of Connaught, the rest being Ulster men, and more than half of them were from County Mayo.

DIAMOND MINES OF THE WORLD.

It is estimated that about 25,000 people are employed in the diamond mines throughout the world. In paid countries 65,000 people were working in some single Indian mine at one time, and perhaps that statement is not exaggerated, since with modern machinery one mine can now accomplish as much as twenty who were the primitive methods. The total value of all the diamonds in the world is estimated to be $1,000,000,000.

CURIOUS FRANK OF NATURE.

A curious frank of nature was exhibited recently by W. F. Harrison of Warren, Vt. It is a large apple, red-striped in color, with the exception of a quarter section about an inch and one-half in width which is a vivid crimson. The apple was the only one grown on the tree and is quite a curiosity.
